Eve of Man. It did a lot more to make me understand and relate to the main character than the first one and the pacing and plot line were pretty I was rather hoping this book would give me an insight into the reasons for the loss of memory in book one, but in that respect it left me rather dissatisfied.

The Baule people live within the Ivory Coast, [66] they have diviners who divine by trance and by another means, [20] the Baule make a contraption for the purposes of oracular divination, called a ghekre, which contains mice. Overall a solid fantasy novel. I was finally seeing on of the Characters in a new light, and then she goes and does .
