He relates the despair of the mothers with a greater variety of gestures of horror, by which the mothers react to the loss of their children. That the obverse of the hypothesis that history involves a general improvement in child care is that the further back one goes in history, the less effective parents are in meeting the developing needs of the child. She criticised the fact that psychoanalysis ignored serious methodological. However, the typical pattern in Western Europe was the much simpler nuclear family of husband, wife and their children and perhaps a servant, who might well be a relative. For more than a century, theoretical discussion of child art within psychology, education, and art history has been largely structured by two schemas of innocence and corruption. The composition is hierarchically organized into three registers.
