At an early age, until he was nine, Maududi was given home education, he "received religious nurture at the hands of his father and from a variety of teachers employed by. This is exactly what Islam has called as the root cause of mischief in politics. He believed there was no such thing as a low "reasonable rate of interest" [] and that even "the smallest and apparently harmless form" [] of interest was intolerable in Islam as rates would inevitably increased over time when the "capitalists" moneylenders squeezed the entrepreneurs borrowers eliminating any entrepreneurial profit.
